++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Some heavy rain this weekend, settling down next week.

This Evening and Tonight:
Mostly dry in the east with broken cloud and a few mist patches. Rain in the west, heavy at times, edging eastwards into some central parts.

Saturday:
Heavy rain moving northeastwards across many parts, becoming persistent across parts of southern Scotland and northeast England. Brighter skies but also heavy, thundery downpours following from the southwest later.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Further showers in the north and east on Sunday, perhaps heavy. Otherwise fine and dry with increasing amounts of sunshine, although cloudier at times in coastal parts of the northeast.
